

REMARKS

1. In response to paragraph 1 of the Office Action, Applicant acknowledges and appreciates Examiner's acceptance, and consequential withdrawal, of the Office's rejections to Applicant's claims 22-40.
2. In response to paragraph 2 and 3 of the Office Action, Applicant acknowledges Examiner's rejection under 35 U.S.C. § 101 of claims 37-40. Applicant adopts the amendments to claims 37-40 kindly suggested by the Office. Accordingly, Applicant requests entry of these amendments and withdrawal of the § 101 rejections of claims 37-40.
3. In response to paragraph 4 of the Office Action, Applicant acknowledges Examiner's rejection of claims 22-40 under 35 U.S.C. § 102 (c) as being anticipated by Marchionda, U.S. Pat. No. 6,628,306 ("Marchionda"). Applicant amends and objects with traverse to Marchionda anticipating Applicant's claims 22-40. Applicant's proposed claim amendments do not add any new matter, and are supported by the specification.

For a claim to be anticipated, Marchionda must describe each element and limitation of that claim.¹ Further, Marchionda "must also enable one of skill in the art to make and use the claimed invention."² Below, Applicant provides reasons why Applicant's independent claim 22, and, by analogy, independent claims 30 and 37, are not anticipated by Marchionda as a matter of law.

Amended claim 22 states:

selecting, by a sender, email attachment recipients, selectable notification recipients, and excluded recipients for the email to be sent, wherein the excluded recipients do not receive the email attachment;

receiving, from the sender, an instruction to add a selectable notification for the email attachment to the email to be sent to the selectable notification recipients, wherein the sender

selectively enables transmission of the email attachment to the selectable notification recipients through inclusion of the selectable notification with the email; and transmitting the email to the email attachment recipients, the email with the selectable notification to the selectable notification recipients, and the email to the excluded recipients.

Unlike Applicant's claims, Marchionda does not describe Applicant's first claim element and limitation of "selecting ... selectable notification recipients." Nowhere in Marchionda, including specifically at the Office's cited sections thereof, is there any description remotely related to "selectable notification recipients" or even a "selectable notification" as further discussed below.

Building on the foregoing reason, nowhere does Marchionda describe Applicant's second claim element and limitation of "receiving, from the sender, an instruction to add a selectable notification for the email attachment to the email to be sent to the selectable notification recipients." Respectfully, Applicant disagrees with the Office that Marchionda at abstract and col. 4, ll. 51-62 teaches Applicant's second element, and with the Office's statement: "note the different options built from instructions that is the makeup of the selectable notification." Applicant disagrees because, at the cited sections, Marchionda describes "the email system drives the display" "to invite the user to select between at least the functions of sending the email message" with or without the email attachment. Here, Marchionda does not describe Applicant's claim limitations of "to add a selectable notification for the email attachment to the email to be sent to the selectable notification recipients." Instead, Marchionda merely describes utilizing a functionality, i.e., selecting, associated with the email client's application: selecting cc: recipients that will or will not receive the email attachment with the email. Unlike Applicant's claimed invention, however, Marchionda completely fails to describe adding something else, i.e., adding "a selectable notification," a real item, to an email. Furthermore, Marchionda does not describe adding this "selectable notification" only for certain email recipients, namely Applicant's claimed "selectable notification recipients.” Accordingly, Marchionda fails to anticipate Applicant’s amended claim 22 for any of these reasons as a matter of law.³

In the previous response filed on January 2, 2008, Applicant noted that the claim amendments’ whereby clauses stated a goal of the invention, and neither changed the substance of the invention nor merely stated the intended result of a positively recited process.⁴ Instead, the whereby clauses stated conditions material to patentability through its limitations, which were integral to patentability and claim construction.⁵ Marchionda does and did not describe these limitations. Here, in this replacement response filed today, Applicant has removed the whereby clauses, and, instead, added limitations through a wherein clause after each of the independent claims’ second element. Marchionda still fails to describe these limitations, now following whereins, because Marchionda does not describe the sender’s ability to selectively enable transmission of the email attachment to the selectable notification recipients through inclusion of the selectable notification with the email.

For any of the above-stated reasons, Marchionda fails to describe all of Applicant’s claim elements and limitations for Applicant’s claim 22, as well as Applicant’s other independent claims 30 and 37 under the same analogy also used by the Office. Accordingly, any and all claims depending from independent claims 22, 30, and 37 are also not anticipated as a matter of law.⁶ Therefore, Applicant respectfully requests withdrawal of all claim rejections under § 102 (c) as a matter of law.
